WOMEN AND TOTS KILLED BY BOMBERS

ROME (Tuesday) Nov. 5. UP—A message from Djibouti, French Somaliland, said 500 Ethiopian soldiers were killed or wounded when two squadrons of Italian airplanes bombed a caravan which the Ethiopian troops were escorting to Harar from British Somaliland.

The Italian planes dropped bombs on the caravans and escort and then swooped low over the black warriors and swept them with machine gun fire. Tremendous explosions followed the Italian attack and the aviators believed their bombs and bullets had set off quantities of explosives in the caravan train.

WITH THE ITALIAN TROOPS, ERN ARMEI, BRYOND EDGAR, HAMUS, Ethiopia, Nov. 4. UP—While the main body of the Italian troops surged across towering mountain ranges toward Makah, General Pietro Maravigna's second army corps branched off today to the Addi Ababa region, 50 miles south of Toluca (Tutu).

This section is noted in which marked "unexplored" on the old maps.

BRITISH TERRITORY (Toluca) is on the river Takkawa in almost a "red line" from Addis Ababa to the Lake Tana district which is a recognized British sphere of influence. Reports in Rome last week and a march toward Gondar was possible soon.

B. P. W. CLUB HEARS TALK ON GERMANY

Seventy-five or more people listened to an interesting talk last evening, following the turkey dinner of the Business & Professional Women's Club. There was no business session.

The speaker was Hines Kuhn, a German Jew who spoke on the Hitler government and its treatment of the Jews. Being the recipient of a scholarship which has enabled him to travel in all parts of the world, the speaker considered himself particularly fortunate in contrast with the lot of those of his race in Germany, who have been deprived of their possessions and are compelled to remain under the jurisdiction of the German government. Kuhn is completing his course leading to a doctor's degree, at the University of California.

An entertaining feature of the meeting was an accordion selection by John Bonchi, a young man who evidenced much artistry in the playing of the instrument. He will appear on a radio program next week.

Rev. Kenneth B. Wallace, who was present with Mrs. Wallace, was called upon to deliver the invocation.

Mrs. Emily Axtell, president.

RESOURCES OF CALIFORNIA IN SERIOUS STATE

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 4—UP—California's natural resources have been depleted to an alarming extent, and only an awakened public interest in conservation can prevent further great losses, according to a report released by the State Planning Board today.

Lack of planning for such resources as mineral and fertile agricultural lands has resulted in a wasteful and virtually reckless use of them which must be checked at once, the report warned.

"Californians of late years," the report declares, "have lived up to and managed this fair land as if it were a limitless resource."

The report, entitled "Progressive State Planning," declared that public apathy toward planning, aggravated by the tendency toward socialism, are recognized as the greatest obstacles toward effecting conservation.

A note of optimism was voiced in the report, however, in pointing out that isolated interest in conservation with especial regard to water supply, has resulted in the approval of long-range planning.

Water resources of the state "hold the key to its destiny," the report stated, and "conservation of water in connection with the development of the state's water resources is the most important task facing the state."

The report also pointed out that the state's water resources are being depleted at an alarming rate, and that the state's water resources are being depleted at an alarming rate.

HERE'S TO YOUR HEALTH
By Dr. FRANK MCCOY
AUTHOR OF THE FIRST BOOK TO TREAT
All questions regarding Health and Diet will be answered. Large, stamped, self-addressed envelope must be enclosed. Write on one side of paper only. Letters must not exceed 150 words. Address: Dr. Frank McCoy, care of this paper.

THE TREATMENT OF LOW BLOOD PRESSURE
Experiments have proven that excitement always raises the blood pressure. This does not mean that excitement is bad, but that it is a factor in the treatment of low blood pressure. The treatment of low blood pressure consists in building up a good quality of blood and developing all of the functional powers of the body. The weakness must be gradually overcome by proper diet changes and the use of physical culture exercises and walking. Improvement will naturally follow, and the patient must be constantly encouraged to be persistent in his exercise and diet if he wishes to overcome this serious condition. Even though the vitality of the person with low blood pressure seems to be low, the best plan is to start right by cleansing the system of all accumulated toxins. This is best accomplished through fasts. A fast of one or two days, or a fast of orange juice every four hours combined with as much water as desired. This fast should be at least five days, during which the headache and other symptoms of discomfort may appear for the first two or three days, due to the fact that the patient has not been used to throwing off the poisons quickly as they are picked up by the blood stream. Following the fast the food must be proportioned and combined with the greatest care so as not to burden the body with excessive amounts of foods which are not its building. All of the vital foods such as proteins in meat, fish, eggs, milk, or food should be combined with the amount of his assimilative powers are necessarily very low and food eaten above his power to digest and assimilate will only be injurious. The one necessary point in low blood pressure is to keep in mind the necessity of developing increased strength. Nothing is more beneficial for this than to take long walks. I do not know of any other treatment or exercise which has the same definite effect as walking for developing a strong blood pressure. Start your walks at once, covering at least a mile the first day and increase this distance gradually until you are walking at least five miles a day. When you are able to do this, have your blood pressure measured again by a physician and you will find that there has been a steady improvement in your health and endurance. In addition to the walking one should take vigorous physical exercises every day, starting with light exercises and gradually increasing the number of movements until you can exercise vigorously for ten to fifteen minutes without producing soreness of the muscles afterwards. Always be sure to breathe deeply while you are taking these exercises. This will assist in toning up the functional activities of the body and assist you in preserving your strength at the same time that your blood pressure is coming back to normal. Do not be satisfied until your blood pressure registers at least 120 mm. while you are calm and relaxed, which will indicate that your strength and vitality are normal. An article on LOW BLOOD PRESSURE is now being published in the form of a booklet, which will be sent to any one desiring a copy. Request the booklet in care of this newspaper and it will be sent to you in a self-addressed envelope and ten cents.

Question: D. and N. ask: "We read your column recently and found it very interesting. We do not understand how the body can be so weak and diseased, do you believe that the body has the power to cure itself of the social diseases, cancer, and tuberculosis?"
Answer: I am pleased to know that you find my articles of value. In the treatment of tuberculosis, I find that the best method is to have the patient adopt those good habits of living which enable the curative forces to come into play. In the treatment of the infectious social diseases, it is necessary to use antiseptics or injections in addition to placing the patient on a better dietetic regimen. Cancer is in itself a serious disorder and most methods of treatment employed do not cause a spontaneous "cure." It is possible to give the patient relief so that the pain is not so severe, or it is possible to remove the cancerous tissue by surgery, but in an advanced case of cancer, no positive hope for recovery may be held out to the patient. Certainly, the normal body has the power to overcome mild attacks of tuberculosis and it is said that examination of the lungs would show that every one living in cities has at some time undergone a mild tubercular infection which the body was able to overcome in such a way that the patient did not realize that tubercular activity was taking place. The curative power of the body is most marked in the acute diseases but it may also be enlisted in overcoming many of the chronic disorders. The majority of instances, however, of the chronic disorders of the treatment we use may either help or hinder the healing process.

The Question of Whether Wearing a Hat Causes Baldness Is Here Discussed

By CLAUD NORTH CHRISMAN, M.D.

THERE are many ways of spending your time in the world, but here is a new one. A survey has recently been reported in a health publication which gives the actual findings concerning the degree of temperature measured inside a hat upon its wearer's head.

To be sure, there is always a lively current discussion as to whether the wearing of a hat could be the cause of baldness. My own house is divided, some of us never going outside without a hat and some of us never coming in without a daytime headpiece. We all have exceptional suits of hair with no tendency to baldness in either case.

But there are many hairless people in the world who are looking for an excuse for their lack and this as good a one as any.

Here is the report of the case of a particular individual, who wore a thermometer inside of his hat and recorded the temperature produced. "When the outside temperature was 77 degrees F. the thermometer inside the hat was 90 degrees, and when the outside temperature rose to 90 degrees at noon, it was 108 inside the hat. In the evening with an outside temperature of 68 degrees F. it was 88 degrees F. inside the hat. A cap showed a temperature of 98 degrees F. inside as compared with 78 degrees F. outside."

What Does It Do?

The question which concerns most of you is what this increase in heat does to your scalp when you wear a hat. Obviously, when hair drops out and stays out, something has happened to the follicle from which it grows.

In any treatise on the care of the hair in either health or disease you are likely to find the injunction that tight fitting hats must be discarded. Without trying to enter into a discussion of baldness, it is evident to any one that both the blood supply and the nervous vitality that are used in producing healthy hair must not be blocked off. Both blood and nerve tissue are essential to the growth of hair.

When we wish to overcome disease and promote vigor among the hair follicles we use stimulating tonics, brims, massages and fresh air. To the extent then, that a hat constricts the blood vessels and compresses the nerve tissues that extend up the sides of the head, to that extent it is likely that wearing a hat is injurious to the hair.

On the other hand, it is not necessary to have the head band of the hat so tight that both the heat and pressure are unrelieved. I do not believe I could say that the increased temperature noted in the survey mentioned above is really injurious. Most people do not wear their hats so continuously that the heat in itself could be harmful. Personally, I always wear a hat and I haven't lost my hair yet.

Hair Falling Out

A. B. C. 26 years old, writes complaining of pale lifelessness of her hair, saying that it grows fast and then falls out with no new hair appearing. The hair is also disappearing from the eyebrows and other hairy regions.

There is evidently some systemic trouble causing this condition. It may be a blood trouble, or some deficiency in the diet or metabolism. A lack of secretion from some of the ductless glands, such as the thyroid or pituitary, may be causing it. I should advise seeing a physician and having a metabolism test made. Three grains of quinine three times a day, increased by one grain every other day until the ringing in the ears is uncomfortable, continued for some weeks, may be helpful. The free use of white vasoline rubbed thoroughly into the scalp, helps to prevent drying and stimulates the hair growth.

Miss J. H. frets because her hair line is too far back and is not becoming to her face. There are a good many thousands of men who are also fussing about this same trouble. She will have to do as I hear some of them do, call it a "faded forehead" and let it go. I could not suggest any process that would cause the normal hair of the head to grow lower on the face.

Rural Electrification

President Roosevelt by executive order has created the Rural Electrification Administration (R. E. A.) as an independent agency to initiate, formulate, administer and supervise a program of approved projects with respect to the generation, transmission and distribution of electric energy in rural areas. Morris Llewellyn Cooke has been appointed R. E. A. administrator by the President.

The sum of $100,000,000 is available for rural electrification out of the $4,800,000,000 appropriated by Congress for the work-relief program. Under the act the President has the authority to increase this allocation if he finds it necessary to do so in order to effectuate the purposes of the act.

Profiles For Today

Balanchine Reminds of Halcyon Days

By TALBOT LAKE

IT is many years since the halcyon days of the Imperial Russian Ballet. With the masterful director, Diaghileff, and the great dancing genius of the world known, Nijinsky, the troupe made one sensation after another, finally capping its success by taking America by storm.

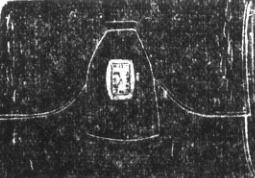

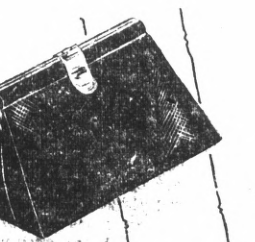

Today it is like a ghost out of the past to read about the new American Ballet, which is touring the country before reporting at the Metropolitan Opera for the season. This is because the artistic director and choreographer is none other than George Balanchine, who had a large hand in bringing the Russian Ballet to its height.

Balanchine went all through the days of the Imperial Russian Ballet, the Diaghileff troupe—which, to all intents and purposes, was the Imperial Ballet—and following that bobbed up here and there over Europe at different opera houses. He is the only active one of the three. Diaghileff is dead and Nijinsky is in an insane asylum.

Two years ago a couple of young Americans, Edward M. M. Warburg, son of Felix Warburg, and Lincoln Kirstein conceived the idea of forming a ballet which might bring that branch of the arts back on its former high pedestal. They formed a school and looked for the best maître de ballet they could find—one who knew the traditions of imperial days. Balanchine, who knew almost nothing about America, was persuaded to give up everything in Europe to lead the school here. His adaptability is well illustrated in his great interest in the American scene. For instance, he has staged a ballet, "Alma Mater," which burlesques the old college traditions, especially the football hero and the Yale fence. He thinks America is the greatest place in the world.

The pupils of the school were drawn entirely from native Americans, and they worked the full two years before appearing in public. That was training of the sort dancers had to undergo in Imperial Ballet days.

NEW BAGS

Illustrated at the top is a brown shoe calf top-handled bag. Inside is a gold metal cigar case which is concealed through a slit and marked with initials forming a bag ornament. The case may be carried apart from the bag. The square-bottomed handbag shown in the center is of black mat calf with gold metal frame and lift, a tailored type. The other bag with watch set into the flap is more dressy and is of calf grain. It is also available in suede, alligator calf, pin calf or mat calf.

Wooing Sleep By Exercising Good Method

By JACQUELINE HUNT

IF BEAUTY could be won by cosmetics, reducing courses and exercise alone, we should be a race of glamorous women. Yet all of us know women who spend hours before their dressing tables, brushing, massaging, scrubbing and exercising to keep their figures lithe, and trying out new tricks of make-up to keep their faces young without getting the desired result.

Of course, they achieve a well-groomed look, but often there is a suggestion of fatigue about the finished job. The eyes are dull and tired, and there is a tension that is disturbing to everyone about them. What you—and all of us—must conquer is dissipation of energy.

Train yourself to stop all you are doing and relax occasionally, to have a beauty nap as many times a week as you can, and to go to bed earlier every night. If you have been going places and doing things under tension for some time you may find relaxation difficult at first.

"Why," you ask, "should I go to bed early when I cannot get to sleep for hours?"

The reason for sleeplessness is partly psychological. You fear you cannot sleep, and your efforts to coax Morpheus only make you more tense. Try to take the matter more philosophically, by realizing that the loss of a few hours occasionally is not a catastrophe.

Try out different methods of getting to sleep. Reading is probably the most popular. But, in my opinion, the relaxation induced by muscular tiredness is most effective. Bedtime exercises that are so simple you can do them mechanically after the first few times, are certainly worth giving a trial.

Take your restful warm bath, open your window and settle all of your problems for the night, slip into bed and, lying quietly, think about your feet and fingertips for a moment. Now stretch your arms as high as you can, pulling from the tips of the fingers until you feel every joint stretch.

Next stretch your entire body, pulling downward with your heels and upward from your middle. When you feel thoroughly limber, twist and turn, first raising the right hip while the shoulders lie flat on the bed, then raise the left hip. Twist about ten times.

Now, keep the hips flat on the bed and twist and raise first one shoulder and then the other. Keep your body and arms as straight as possible through these movements. About ten times is enough for the shoulder exercises. Then rest a few minutes, and repeat the whole set of exercises until you simply can't help drifting off to slumber.

Beauty Tips

QUESTION: "Every time I see anyone demonstrating a new line of cosmetics I buy half a dozen things that I almost never use. My skin is very dry, but when I use a lot of cosmetics it becomes shiny in spots, looks terrible and feels uncomfortable. Can you tell me what I should use? I will try to resist buying a lot of unnecessary things hereafter."—D. E.

Why not go to the other extreme and be a one-cream girl for awhile? Get a good all-purpose cream and use it for a preliminary cleanser before soap and water. After rinsing, again apply a liberal film of the cream and massage with light upward strokes and gentle pats for five minutes. Wipe off the excess cream and pat with cotton pads saturated with ice water or skin tonic. Use a liquid foundation—applied sparingly while your skin is still moist, then apply your rouge and dust with powder. There is a new liquid foundation that is made with an oil base so it is non-drying, although it gives a dull smooth finish to your skin. I will be glad to tell you more about it on receipt of a three-cent stamped, self-addressed envelope.

QUESTION: "My hair is very dry. Would two or three hot oil treatments a week instead of hair tonics hasten the improvement? Can I use plain oil on my hair? Also, how often should I shampoo?"—V. A.

A thorough shampoo, preceded by a hot oil treatment every ten days, is sufficient. Between the hot oil treatments I would advise a special tonic for dry hair, used daily before your scalp massage and brushing treatments. You might also use a good grade of brilliantine or a hair pomade worked into the ends and shafts of your hair as a dressing between shampoos. Check up on your scalp condition. Dry hair often indicates a nervous or physical condition that needs attention.

An Idea From Paris

Lucien Lelong features rich satin brocades for his new evening mode. In this period frock in off-white and etching brown coloring, the petal gored bodice, attached to the skirt in front, flares in back into a little peplum. Brown tulle edges the decollete and forms the shoulder straps.

Ruffles Make Showing on Candy Coats Now Used Dance Frocks

By IRENE VAIL

New York—At the opening of a swank nightclub the other night one of the smart young women chose a picture frock of black chantilly lace, with off-shoulder decollete and fichu. The skirt was full, with ruffles all over it. It will be a pretty season in formal fashions if laces are again given good play.

In a surprising number of models jewelry is implicated in the dress design. It serves as a neck finish or is depended on to give the proper accent on yoke, collar, or belt. Necklaces, dresses, meaning dresses either finished at the collar line with necklace or with a beaded design on the bodice simulating a necklace, are one of the talking points of the season.

A jewelry fashion involves the use of ribbon. This is the jewel necklace or "ruff" composed of strands of pearls or colored beads which are fastened to velvet ribbons, the ribbons tying in a bow at the back of the neck. They are presented in choker types or in longer lengths, the ribbons permitting adjustability in addition to being decorative. Another interesting use of ribbon is the use of velvet ribbon bands which fasten closely about the throat and adopt rhinestone ornaments at the center front, these neckbands having an old-fashioned appeal.

Fashions presented in style shows continue to call upon ribbon accents, most often to supply a note of color on a black costume. Green with black is a favorite combination, as in a black velvet evening dress with camellia decollete accented by shirred ribbons of bright green velvet, or in a black taffeta evening frock with green velvet ribbon accentuating the Empire waistline, brought up to a point at front and tying in a bow at back.

Reports of favorite styles include comments on ribbon-trimmed types. One coat dress, for example, is developed of cashmere crepe knit and bound with grosgrain ribbon, and another favorite is in matelasse crepe with a series of velvet ribbon bows tied across the white vestee.

The velvet dress with its accent of starched lace either in Venetian type or Irish is another perennial which is considerably evident this season.

Modes and Manners

QUESTION: "Please inform me through the Modes and Manners column if it is correct for a man and woman to walk arm and arm together."—Berit L.

ANSWER: Anyone needing his support, as an old lady, old gentleman or invalid may lean on his arm. Otherwise a man and woman walk side by side in the daytime, the gentleman offering his arm in a crowd or when the street is broken up, making walking difficult or unsafe.

MODERN WOMEN

Perhaps It's a Good Idea for Old Couples to Get Married

By MARIAN MAYS MARTIN

WHEN a man, age 74, advertises for a wife, that's news. And when he wants a wife between the ages of 40 and 65, that's news too. All this happened a short time ago, and it is to be hoped that by this time a marriage has taken place between the man who knows just what he wants and a woman who has

You and Your Child

Young Bookworm Needs to Get Out More

By JANE HERBERT GOWARD

IT WAS a bright sunny day. Outside a group of boys were engaged in football play. Their voices rang out clear and true. From time to time the patter of feet skipping or running could be heard. There were other children passing by on their way to play or while engaged in play. Inside, Allen was engrossed in a book. From time to time he chewed a fingernail, but otherwise there were no outward signs of excitement or that he may have been enjoying fun through the book.

"Why isn't Allen outside with the other children?" a caller asked. The boy's mother took a deep breath and swelled with pride. "Allen is different. He would rather read than play."

Allen is different from children who would rather play than read. They are rosy cheeked and hearty; he is pale—interestingly pale, according to some—also forgetful, and retiring. Allen needs to get out more, and no doubt he would if it were made possible.

There is a mistaken idea that the child who "loves" to read is in some mysterious way of a superior nature. But this trait may be inherited rather than inborn, and as a rule it is. Allen's mother, for example, taught him to read long before he started going to school. Thus, when the boy should have been read to from books he was able to read for himself. This meant that the book or the story, instead of being reserved for his diversion during periods of relaxation, was to become his chief form of activity. It meant, further, that educationally the cart was being put before the horse. For a child should not have to learn to read from books. He should have a chance to live actively and get to know people before he develops the reading habit.

Who Has Better Right?

If a man of 74 hasn't a right to marry and seek a wife in his own way, who has? He has reached the age when he should not have to obtain anyone's consent, excepting, of course, his bride-to-be. He has the privilege of preferring married life to a lonely old age.

My own grandfather took unto himself his third wife at the age of 84 and lived happily with her until his death at 93. This wife brought him great solace and companionship in his declining years. She was in her sixties at the time of her marriage and brought to her home surroundings which made her remaining years the best of her whole life.

If there is a humorous side to a late-in-life marriage it is only to those who never have experienced loneliness.

If ever one needs companionship it is in the autumn of life. It must be a solace then to have something of one's own to cling to, someone to hear the life story, and to have a real interest in it, who is content to sit in the twilight and not wish herself free from a garrulous old soul whose only remaining joy is recounting the past.

She Was Welcomed

None of us begrudged our new step-grandmother her corner in the sunny window. In fact, her coming brought a comforting assurance and release.

Much of the dearliness of old age comes from lack of sympathetic companionship. Imagine the thrill of finding a companion to whom your life story was entirely new and fresh. What greater incentive to marriage could an old man have, what greater happiness than the companionship of a sympathetic woman with not only sympathy in her soul, but attitude in her heart for being rescued from the dreary fate of being alone.

Marriages of convenience are scoffed at by our countrymen, but there is a good deal to be said for them on the ground of honesty of purpose. In any event, a marriage of convenience seems to me more creditable than one built on false pretense. At least, one comes nearer knowing what to expect, and for that matter, has a better chance of getting out of such a marriage just what one wants. Such marriages are often built on a mutual need. In the case of our would-be bridegroom of 74, the need is for a woman about the house, and in the case of the woman who will answer the summons, it's the need for a house to be around.

Short Cuts

For serving soup, toasted parsley crackers are recommended. The salted crackers spread with butter and a generous sprinkling of minced parsley. Broil until brown under the oven flames and serve hot.

Meat may be pounded to break connective tissue and make it more tender. If a little flour is pounded into the meat, it will hold and help retain the juices.

For the maximum amount of lighting, keep bulbs and fixtures scrupulously clean. Have the ceiling painted white or off-white; the walls in light color.

Night Club Man Death Held Due To Heart Attack

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 4.—UP.—Robert Goldenberg, alias Bob Goldie, reputed night club and gambling establishment owner, was found dead in his hotel room here today.

Death came from a heart attack, the coroner's office reported. The homicide squad, which had investigated Goldenberg's sudden death after Dr. Paul Chapin disclosed that he had treated the dead man yesterday for facial cuts and scratches purportedly the result of a fight, withdrew from the case tonight when relatives of Goldenberg declared they were satisfied that death came from natural causes.

MUCH DAMAGE

Some observers estimated property damage throughout the strike area would run as high as 25 percent. Many frame houses were demolished and hundreds of roofs blown off and windows shattered. Palm trees and shrubbery were uprooted throughout the entire area. Jackson Memorial Hospital at Miami reported between 50 and 60 storm victims treated. Riverside hospital treated 8, one of whom was injured seriously.

Three other local hospitals also reported treating many storm victims. Jim Higgins, former wrestler, was in a hospital at Fort Lauderdale. Authorities said he was wounded five times by bullets in a shooting caused by an argument over putting storm shutters up at a Hollywood hotel.

HOMES WIPED OUT

Mayor H. T. Wibaux of Santa estimated that 50 percent of homes there had been damaged severely but would not hazard a guess on how high damage totals might run. He had unofficially reported that the Dade farming community nine miles west had been flattened and more than 400 persons made homeless.

Urgent need of food and drinking water was reported from Ocala, by C. V. Patterson, custodian of the school building where more than 50 homeless sought aid. Patterson believed probably 200 of the town's 900 inhabitants lost their homes.

The town's entire negro section was reduced to wreckage and 250 negroes were quartered at a nearby CCC camp.

TANKER AGROUND

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Nov. 4.—UP—The local Coast Guard station tonight dispatched two cutters to the aid of a tanker aground off Miami Beach.

The cutter Seneca was 100 miles south and the Seneca 75 miles north of the beach on which the vessel was grounded. Neither was expected to reach the vessel in less than octane content of gasoline to a 100 degree, using the present 85 octane motor fuel, and with "hydrogenation" the octane content will again be boosted to a ratio of 100 or more, it is said.

Work on the "polymerization" unit will start at once and require about six months to build, Pachin said. He was unable to say how many men the work will employ, or whether it will be done by the company or under contract. These features of the program have not yet been decided.

Accompanied by a refinement in aviation engines to produce higher compression, the new fuel will accomplish many changes in both military and civilian flying, the scientists believe.

Planes will need less fuel and use motor engines, thus reducing the flying range, decreasing the load, and saving more room for passengers and freight in the case of commercial planes and for bombs in military planes.

The aviation fuel standard is intended to produce a developed utilization of power hitherto used only as fuel under boilers and still. Molecules of certain hydrocarbons are being combined to form a liquid which when combined with gasoline gives a fuel of high octane rating. The process is called "polymerization." In a second step hydrogen is added through "hydrogenation" to form the base for the 100 octane fuel.

Stories Differ On Burlesque Show Dispute

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 4.—UP—Contradictory reports were issued today by the employers and representatives of twenty chorines from "The Minstrels," who assertedly went on strike after a wage dispute.

L. K. Gubin, attorney for the show girls, announced that his clients received a settlement which included the payment of their transportation to Hollywood.

"There was no settlement," declared J. W. Ehrlich, representing the management of the show.

The show left for Chicago over the week-end after a stay in San Francisco which was featured by sensational allegations brought and later withdrawn by Sally Sweet, featured performer, against Frank Deamant, pianist and composer, charging Deamant with striking her in a quarrel over a song.

Annex Will Have Fire Protection

Sometime in the future the Richmond Annex section of the city is to be provided with a fire house station.

The first step for the contemplated improvement was taken last evening by the council when a deed from Joseph and Rose Fletcher to lots 41 and 42, block 55, was presented, and a warrant for $500 ordered drawn in payment of the property.

S. F. DEPUTY IS CHARGED WITH PADDING BILL

SACRAMENTO, Nov. 4.—UP—Charges that a San Francisco deputy sheriff signed other deputies' names in presenting expense claims for the transportation of patients to state mental hospitals were filed here today by Controller Ray L. Riley, State Controller.

The deputy, A. Weigle, has been suspended pending results of the investigation.

Weigle is likewise reported to have padded expense accounts in transporting groups of patients from San Francisco to state hospitals by making her own trip, though presenting claims for each patient thereby collecting multiple fees.

Deputy Controller Claude Cooper is investigating these and other charges involving alleged conspiracy to defraud in the San Francisco sheriff's office.

"There is no evidence that Sheriff W. J. Fitzgerald was aware of the methods adopted by Weigle in presenting claims," Riley stated.

No information has been discovered as yet that names of non-existent patients were submitted in the collection of transportation fees although investigators suspect that this may have been the case.

"All trips will be checked against the names, and all claims will be audited with institution heads," Riley declared in outlining the procedure the controller's office plans to take to track down allegedly fraudulent claims.

Special Gas Tax Fund Is Created

They worked quickly for two nights, the pair had sawed five feet of six cell bars on a ventilator shaft. They were just starting on the sixth and all-important bar when jailer Robert Nelson detected a scratching noise and summoned deputy sheriffs to investigate.
